

that the mere legalization of a form of gambling will bring in organized crime, we would have to close down Ak-Sar-Ben, the bingo games in churches, and so forth. For your information, I am sure this is not news to you, Governors even have bet across state lines on the outcome of sporting events. When one Governor's school or the school of the Governor's state is in a Bowl Game, he will bet the Governor of the state from which the opposing school comes something of value on the outcome of the game. I am going to read for you, if I can find it, well, I don't see my copy so I am going to borrow the one I gave to Senator Beutler, some of the legitimate sources you can go to for information on gambling. And, remember, the only place in the country where sports wagering is legal is in Nevada. If the only place that you can wager legally is in Nevada, there is no need in giving the odds or the point spreads on sporting events in states throughout the country. The only reason that is given is because there are millions, hundreds of millions of dollars wagered illegally every year on sporting events. The Omaha World Herald gives the Latest Line which means the point spread, and to make those of you who are unfamiliar with this know what that means, if you have two teams that are playing and one is obviously superior to the other one, for the purpose of betting, you even out the odds by saying that the person who takes the weak team is given so many points to add to the score that his team actually achieves. The team that is strong, you subtract a like number of points from their winning score, and if after you have made these calculations one team comes out ahead of the other, that is the one declared the winner. So based on the point spread or the odds that are laid in this fashion, Nebraska could be favored over Oklahoma by 15 points. Nebraska could actually win the game, but if they only win by 14, whoever bet on Oklahoma wins because when you subtract 15 points, which was the spread, from Nebraska's score of 14 points, Nebraska, for the purpose of betting, loses by one point. Some of the information that I gave you, I will tell you what that means, but on the front page, I want this into the record, the legitimate sources of the spreads, and these are only some of them, the Omaha World Herald does give that Latest Line every day during basketball and football season. The Lincoln Journal and the Lincoln Star have an entire section during football season that they put out on Friday which gives their selections based on what other pickers, touts, and handicappers have decided and they also give the Las Vegas point spreads.
